

How to present your work?

Karën Fort

karen.fort@loria.fr / <https://members.loria.fr/KFort>

What you should not do

What you should do

Slides from the worst presentation ever

Plagiarism is BAD¹

¹and forbidden

What about using an LLM?

It is like going to the gym with a forklift!

What you should not do

What you should do

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)
- ▶ do not rush during your presentation $\Rightarrow$ make choices (don't present everything)

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)
- ▶ do not rush during your presentation $\Rightarrow$ make choices (don't present everything)
- ▶ watch the audience, not your slides

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)
- ▶ do not rush during your presentation $\Rightarrow$ make choices (don't present everything)
- ▶ watch the audience, not your slides
- ▶ transition smoothly between speakers

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)
- ▶ do not rush during your presentation $\Rightarrow$ make choices (don't present everything)
- ▶ watch the audience, not your slides
- ▶ transition smoothly between speakers
- ▶ no full sentences on slides

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)
- ▶ do not rush during your presentation $\Rightarrow$ make choices (don't present everything)
- ▶ watch the audience, not your slides
- ▶ transition smoothly between speakers

- ▶ no full sentences on slides
- ▶ source all your illustrations (else it's plagiarism)

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)
- ▶ do not rush during your presentation $\Rightarrow$ make choices (don't present everything)
- ▶ watch the audience, not your slides
- ▶ transition smoothly between speakers

- ▶ no full sentences on slides
- ▶ source all your illustrations (else it's plagiarism)

- ▶ put some examples

Presenting your work: some basics

- ▶ start preparing in advance and rehearse your presentation (with your colleagues/friends)
- ▶ 15 min presentation = more or less 15 slides (no more than 20, even if you're quick)
- ▶ do not rush during your presentation $\Rightarrow$ make choices (don't present everything)
- ▶ watch the audience, not your slides
- ▶ transition smoothly between speakers

- ▶ no full sentences on slides
- ▶ source all your illustrations (else it's plagiarism)

- ▶ put some examples
- ▶ justify your work (why is it important?)